Foreword

By Sir Colville Young GCMG, Ph.D

A language, like a people, can be marginalized — by which I mean, it can be treated as insignificant or even unworthy of being called a language, or of scholarly interest. The creole and pidgin languages of the world have especially suffered in this regard. As the noted creolist Dell Hymes<sup>1</sup> put it in 1971, “The languages called pidgins and creoles have long been a stepchild, so far as serious attention, either public or scientific, is concerned.” He added, significantly, “The stepchild may prove to be a Cinderella.”

Most people now accept that it is most unreasonable to ignore or denigrate the daily speech (and in many cases the only speech) of millions of people.

One reason for the slow acceptance of pidgins and creoles as “real” languages was the fact that they “lacked a dictionary or grammar.” Of course, all languages at one time lacked dictionaries, or formal, codified exposition of their grammatical systems.

As far as Belize Kriol grammar is concerned, a scholarly grammar has long been made available in my doctoral thesis “Belize Creole: a study of the Creolized English spoken in (Belize).”<sup>2</sup> All that was needed to silence the nay-sayers completely was a dictionary, and with this publication that need is met at last.

I believe Belize Kriol to be the most widely used of all the many languages spoken in Belize. If for no other reason, it deserves a published list of its words, with their meanings and variety of usages as well as (if space permits) etymologies where these can be determined, and examples of the words correctly used in sentences.

Professor Richard Allsopp describes a dictionary as “a reliable inventory of one’s environment, small or large.”<sup>3</sup>

The words which form that inventory of our Kriol are from a variety of sources, reflecting the language’s long existence and development, and exposure to a variety of influences.

There are words from African languages that date from the days of slavery, for example juk, nyam and guzu. The first, juk, is so widely used that foreign nurses and doctors have to include “nail- juk” (not “nail-puncture”) in their vocabulary when they come to work in Belize. Nyam (“eat”) is for most urban Belizeans rather archaic if not obsolete — but is alive and well in most rural communities, especially the villages of the Belize River valley. Guzu (“bad luck; something that brings bad luck”) is least heard of of the three examples I have given of African survivals.

An African survival I find fascinating is Krofi, which is actually a mispronunciation of Kofi, an African day-name. (The correct original form of the name is seen in Kofi Anan, the former U. N. Secretary-General.)

Then there are words of Spanish origin, three being goma (“hangover”), tableta (“a coconut confection”) and the quite ubiquitous bali/balidor (“friend”) from Mexican –Spanish valedor of similar meaning.

Faced with the flora and fauna of a new environment, the early settlers (whether British or African) often used a word familiar from their home usage. A good example is the berry Coccoloba uvifera called “grape” in Belize because its colour, size and shape resemble the grape the early settlers knew from Britain.

Then there are the numerous Miskito words borrowed from the speech of the Miskito “Indians” who worked in the timber industry in slavery and post-slavery days.

Whatever the origins, the words which make up the vocabulary of our Kriol have at last been adequately recognized and I am sure I speak for all Belize in congratulating the editors of the dictionary and the Kriol Council whose hard work has now borne fruit.

As the Summer Institute of Linguistics puts it, “Groups which have lived on the fringes of more dominant cultures are now finding more of a place for their own unique identity and a viability of their own language in the wider culture.”<sup>4</sup>

Even as we are grateful to have as our official language English, the most widely spoken (and therefore most useful) language on our planet, we are proud to keep alive our national cultures, and the languages through which those cultures find their fullest expression – and that must include the Kriol language.

Preface

The compilers of this dictionary subscribe to the words of the following creed: “As the most uniquely human characteristic a person has, a person’s language is associated with his self-image. Interest in and appreciation of a person’s language is tantamount to interest in and appreciation of the person himself. All languages are worthy of preservation in written form by means of grammars, dictionaries, and written texts. This should be done as part of the heritage of the human race.”<sup>5</sup>

Therefore, the purpose of this dictionary is to provide an authoritative, affordable reference guide to Kriol – the language spoken by the majority of Belizeans. It is a bilingual dictionary, with the second part in English – the official language of Belize.

Myrna Manzanares and Silvana Woods played key roles in the development of this dictionary. Because of a deep love and respect for the Belizean culture and language, they have been long-time advocates of the preservation and development of Kriol. They are among the founding members of the Belize Kriol Project, the language arm of the National Kriol Council. Ms. Manzanares is currently the president of the NKC. She is a writer and educator, and is at present working with the Belize Family Life Association. Silvana Woods, popularly known as Kriol Gyal, serves as secretary and public relations officer for the NKC. She is a lecturer at the University of Belize and is currently working on her doctorate, researching the use of Kriol in education.

Yvette Herrera wrote many of the definitions and sample sentences, and helped with the final editing. She is the head translator for the Belize Kriol Project, and has participated in cooperative efforts with other Kriol projects in the Caribbean region.

Paul and Cynthia Crosbie, linguists from SIL International, have been working with the Belize Kriol Project since 2001. Paul Crosbie did the major work of compiling, researching and editing each of the entries in the dictionary. Cynthia helped with editing and did the computer lay-out in preparation for publication. The Crosbies were members of the language project which completed a translation of the New Testament and a bilingual dictionary in the French Creole of St. Lucia. In Belize they continue the work begun by Ken and Sandy Decker, also of SIL. The Deckers came to Belize in 1993 in response to a request from Dr. Colville Young and a number of other Belizeans who shared a desire for Kriol language development. SIL International is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to facilitate language-based development through linguistic research, Scripture translation and literacy.

Our hope is that the Belizean public will use this dictionary as they learn to read and write and appreciate Kriol. We trust that it will help teachers as they educate our children, and that it will also benefit foreigners who want to learn Kriol. And we are glad to be able to add to the study of Creoles throughout the Caribbean region. Everyone on the dictionary team has enjoyed working with our beautiful Kriol language, and we believe that each of you will enjoy reading and using this publication.

A final note: This first edition of the Kriol dictionary is a work in progress. We did not attempt to create an exhaustive dictionary, but instead prepared our current data for publication to fill the immediate need for a reference tool such as this. There are many more Kriol words, senses of meanings, scientific names, and etymological information that could and should be added. We are relying on the public to give us feedback for future editions. The final page of this dictionary provides a place where you can record your revision notes.

Acknowledgements

It takes a whole community to make a dictionary such as this, and we are indebted to the many people who helped to make it possible.

We want to thank His Excellency Sir Colville Young, Governor-General of Belize, noted educator, musician, and pre-eminent Creole linguist. Wi tank ahn tu di nohmoh nohmoh! He has supported the Belize Kriol Project from its inception, and willingly shared his own research with us. We studied his books, articles and lectures to glean information about the etymologies of Kriol words.

We are indebted to Ken and Sandy Decker, linguists from SIL International, whose research of Belize Kriol spanned 11 years. They helped to compile the popular Belize Kriol Glossary and Spelling Guide, and we used their data-base to develop this dictionary. In addition, we benefited from the descriptive grammar of Belize Kriol written by Ken Decker (see References at the end of this volume). We are also thankful for SIL literacy specialist, Naomi Glock, who held writers' workshops in Belize from 2001-2005 to help develop a body of Kriol literature. The results of her work added greatly to our knowledge. Paul Townsend, linguistic and dictionary consultant for SIL, did a final check of the whole dictionary to give SIL's authorization for its publication.

Although the definitions and sample sentences are from our own research, we checked many other sources to verify and refine our findings, especially regarding the origins of some words. We are indebted to the research of those who came before us, particularly the late George McKesey, for The Belizean Lingo, and Richard Allsopp, for his Dictionary of Caribbean English Usage. For information regarding English usage, we relied heavily on Webster's Dictionary and the Concise Oxford English Dictionary.

Other knowledgeable Belizeans volunteered their help to edit and write sample sentences for sections of this dictionary, including National Kriol Council members, Joey Belisle and Rev. Lynda Moguel; University of Belize librarians, Josephine Mendoza and Merlene Henkis; Delanni Romero. Several University of Belize classes did some of the research and editing as part of their class work: Dr. Vilma Joseph's Intro. to Linguistics class (Oct.-Dec. '03) researched the C and D sections of the dictionary; two of Silvana Woods' English classes (Fall semester '06) assisted in checking the U through Z sections.

We must thank the hundreds of Belizean teachers who have been instilling pride in the Kriol language through their Kriol cultural appreciation exercises. We are particularly indebted to the Ministry of Education and Culture and the National Institute of Culture and History (NICH) for the publication of this dictionary, and for their ongoing efforts at incorporating the benefits of mother-tongue literacy in curricula.

Of course, the popularization of the spelling system would not have been possible without the frequent calls from organizations and businesses who want the standard Kriol spelling for banners and logos, and from the media, who have given broad coverage to publications of the Belize Kriol Project. In particular, we acknowledge Amandala columnist Colin Hyde, journalist Ann-Marie Williams, talk-show host Rosalie T. Staines of Oapn Paki, and Harry Lawrence, publisher of The Reporter newspaper which hosts the weekly Kriol column Weh Wi Ga Fi Seh.

Some of our older citizens made themselves available to answer questions about the meanings of words. These include Nella Woods, Meg Craig, Cashan Aspinall, Norma Flowers, Lorraine Williams and Harold Zuniga. Dozens of other Belizean friends and neighbours and passers-by on the street patiently answered questions and participated in impromptu polls regarding word meanings and pronunciations. Hundreds more took time to give feedback when they visited booths hosted by the National Kriol Council at fairs and other public events in both urban and rural communities over the past decade. To each we say, “Tenk yu!”

Introduction

History and purpose of the Dictionary Project

Much has been written about the history of the Kriol language of Belize (see: Young 2002; Decker 2005), and analysis of Creole languages has become a popular topic among linguists and educators.<sup>1</sup> Suffice it here to say that for many years Kriol was not considered a true language, much less a language worthy of being written. But in the post-colonial decades, Belizeans and Creole-speakers throughout the Caribbean area have come to have a growing pride in their culture and language. As more people attempted to write down their thoughts, stories and poems in Kriol, and to read what others had written, it became increasingly evident that the English writing system alone did not serve the purpose, and a more standardized system of writing Kriol was needed.

In 1994 a workshop was held in Belize City to develop an orthography (writing system) for Kriol. Participants were people who had been actively writing in Kriol, as well as representatives from community organizations and church and educational institutions. The result of this effort was a set of spelling rules based partially on the English system of writing and partially on phonemics.

In 1995 the National Kriol Council was formed. It is a non-profit organization whose members believe that appreciation of and literacy in one's mother-tongue is essential for self-enrichment and expression of identity. The NKC is committed to producing literature and training in the Kriol language so that everyone whose first language is Kriol, and anyone else who is interested in Kriol, has the opportunity to read and write in this rich language. The Council is also committed to the preservation of Kriol culture. The Belize Kriol Project was formed as the language-development arm of the Council.

In 1997 the Kriol Project produced the Bileez Kriol Glassary an Spellin Gide. But after several years of testing, Kriol-speakers complained that it was difficult to remember all the rules; and the system required a person to be already proficient in English, a language which has one of the most complicated spelling systems in the world.

In 2002 the Kriol Project called together a committee to revise the system to a completely phonological orthography, similar to those used by many other languages. This writing system is based on sound rather than rules. Each sound is represented by only one symbol. Once a person learns the symbol for each sound, he or she will more easily know how to read and write any word in Kriol. The goal of the committee was not to dictate how Belizeans should speak Kriol, but to help us all find a standardized method in which to write down what we say so that we can share it more easily with each other. Important advantages of this system are that knowledge of English spelling rules is not required in order to write Belize Kriol, and variants in regional and generational speech can be represented. Those already literate in English will need to remember that English and Kriol are two separate languages, and they will need to make an effort to learn the symbols associated with the Kriol writing system.

As literature has been produced to test the new orthography and people are learning to use it, there has been an urgent call for a dictionary to use as an authoritative reference, so work on it has been going on in earnest. This dictionary represents the current spelling decisions, although some refinements may come about as more people use the orthography.

Development of this edition

Many Belizean educators find that their students do not understand key concepts if they are presented only in English. Rather than denigrating Kriol, some teachers are using it as a stepping-stone to better education. They are finding that by explaining the contrast between English and Kriol, students gain a better understanding of both languages. Reference tools and literature in both languages are needed. To help in this task, the dictionary committee decided to make a bilingual dictionary that includes sample sentences in both Kriol and English.

Deciding which words to include was a most difficult task, and in the end, our decisions were somewhat arbitrary. While we strove to preserve the older Kriol forms of words for historical purposes, our focus was to reflect contemporary Kriol – the way in which Kriol is spoken today. Belize is blessed with a rich blend of cultures and languages, all of which are important. But in this dictionary we tried to focus on words and expressions that are associated with Kriol culture. Therefore, words from the Mestizo, Mayan or Garifuna cultures have been represented only when they have been well-adopted into the Kriol language and culture.

Because of the advent of TV and Internet, many new English words have been introduced and have become part of the Kriol vocabulary. They are part of our large database of words gleaned from conversations and stories told and written by Belizeans. Again, the decision as to which of these words to include in the dictionary was somewhat arbitrary, but generally, we tried to follow these guidelines:

- If an English word, which is now used regularly among Kriol speakers, has a Kriol spelling which looks greatly different from the English spelling, it might be included in the dictionary, so that the dictionary can be used as a spelling tool.
- If an English word has the same meaning and the same spelling as the corresponding word in Kriol, it was not usually included in the dictionary.
- If an English word is regularly heard, but there is a well-known Kriol word or phrase that better expresses the same meaning, the English word was generally not included.

Guide to Using the Dictionary

This dictionary is in two parts. The first part, Kriol-English, is arranged alphabetically according to Kriol key words, with an English definition and other entry items as described in the sample entries below.

The second part of the dictionary, English to Kriol, is arranged alphabetically according to the English key word. Only the part of speech and the correlating Kriol word(s) are given in this section. The purpose of this part of the dictionary is to point the reader to the correct spot in the Kriol-English section of the dictionary for more complete information.

Kriol to English

Sample Entry in the Kriol-English section of the dictionary:

1. Kriol key word	2. part of speech	3. English definition	4. Kriol example sentence & English translation
ded v. die. If yu jrink paizn, yu wahn ded. If you drink poison, you'll die. See: kik di bokit, peg owt. — n. 1) dead. Mi pa, Gaad res di ded, yoostu seh yu mos aalwayz ga manaz fi di oalda pipl. My father, God rest his soul, used to say that you must always have good manners toward older people. 2) death. Mayri staat tu si sain seh ded mi-di kaal ih gram. Mary started to see signs that death was calling her grandmother. See: det. — adj. 1) dead. Dehn bileev seh ded pipl noh wahn rayz op

5. sense number

6. cross-reference

1. Key word

Each entry in the dictionary begins with a keyword in bold type.

Sub-entry: Sometimes an entry is a phrase rather than a single word. It will appear as a subentry after the single word root entry, or in some cases, as its own main entry. For example, at the end of the entry for ayz (ear) are the sub-entries put bihain yu ayz and stik brok eena ih ayz.

Homonyms: Occasionally the key word is followed by a small raised number. This number distinguishes two or more words that are spelled the same but are not related in meaning. Each word will have a separate entry. In the example below, bon<sup>1</sup> meaning ‘to burn’ is a completely different word than bon<sup>2</sup> meaning ‘bun’.

bon<sup>1</sup> v. 1) burn. 2) hurt emotionally. bon<sup>2</sup> n. bun.

2. Part of speech

In this edition, we are using only broad categories of word classes, as follows: noun, verb, pronoun, adjective, article, adverb, preposition, conjunction, interjection, onomatopoeia (sound words), numbers, salutation, focus marker, phrase. We have not broken the categories into their sub-categories, but further explanation of how Kriol verbs are formed and how pronouns are used is given in the Grammar Notes section. Abbreviations for parts of speech and other words used in this dictionary are given in the List of Abbreviations. Many Kriol words can function as parts of speech in addition to ones we have listed, but we have focused on the main usages as we have commonly heard them.

3. Definition in English

A definition of the Kriol word is given in English. In most cases, one or two words are adequate, but in other cases, additional information is given (following a semicolon) to further define the word.

4. Illustrative (sample) sentence in Kriol with a free translation into English

Generally, the definition of each word or sense is followed by an example sentence (in bold print) to illustrate how the word is used in context. This sentence is followed by a free translation into English.

5. Senses of the same meaning

Sometimes there are different senses of a word – a shared thread of meaning. A primary sense will be listed first, and then secondary sense(s) will be numbered and listed under the same entry. In the first example above, ded, as an adjective, can mean either 1) dead or 2) empty, flat.

6. Cross-reference or synonyms

Sometimes a word will bring to mind a synonym (another word that means the same) or a word that is closely related in meaning. (These will follow the word See:)

7. Variant forms

In some cases, the key word will be followed by an indication of a variant form(s), in an effort to account for differences in pronunciation in various communities and among the different generations of speakers. The form most used by young adults today is generally selected as the main entry. For words where we could not determine which variant is used most often, we made an arbitrary decision. (For example, fi/fa/fo/fu are used interchangeably, but we have chosen fi as the main entry.)

In the following example, bubuman has been chosen as the main form and all the information will be listed under that entry. But bukuman is also a form used by some people, so in looking up bukuman, one would find a minor entry listed like this: bukuman Variant: bubuman.

7. variant form	8. etymology
bubuman (var: bukuman ) n. boogieman. Noh stay owt deh layt kaaz bubuman gwain wid yu. Don't stay out there late because the boogieman will get you. See: bubu, goas. [<Afr. Kikoongo: 'buka' to practise medicine]

The word Archaic after a variant indicates that this form is no longer used, or is used primarily by older Kriol speakers.

Conditioned variants: The pronunciation of some words is affected by the initial sounds of the following words. This is particularly true of words ending in nasal sounds. For example, the English word 'come' is generally written as kohn in Kriol, but in a phrase like 'come up' the pronunciation becomes kom op for some speakers of Kriol. This affects spelling decisions in a phonological spelling system. At this point, the writing system allows for such changes, according to the writer's preference. A few other examples are geh/get, ahn/an, gaahn/gaan, pahn/pan.

8. Etymology

Every word has a history. If the Kriol word is derived directly from an English word, it has not been noted in most cases. However some words derive from sources such as Africa, Miskito, Spanish, etc. Where we know or can surmise the antecedents of a word, we will list them in brackets. The following example shows that one of the meanings of the word bubu probably derives from the Kikoongo tribe in Africa, where the word 'bo' means secretion:

bubu <sup>1</sup> n. nasal mucous. [<African: Kikoongo 'bo' secretion]

Any additional information, such as that of an anthropological nature, will also be listed in brackets at the end of the entry, as in this example:

Blis Laithows n. Bliss Lighthouse; lighthouse located at Fort George, an area of Belize City at the northern entry to the harbour. [The monument to Baron Bliss, a philanthropist who donated large sums of money to Belize, is situated on this same site.]

Additional entry items

Usage: Notes about special usage of a word sometimes appear (in italics) after the definition. In Kriol, a noun is usually pluralized by following it with the word dehn, but in some cases ‘s’ (or ‘z’) are used, following the English system of pluralization. Often in these cases, the plural form is used for both the singular and the plural, or vice versa.

aans n. ants. (Both sg. & pl.)

Additional notes concerning usage are sometimes listed in the entry, such as archaic, slang, religious. Note the following examples:

bisaidn (Archaic) Variant: bisaidz.

Stress is not marked in this dictionary, except in some cases when the Kriol word has a corresponding English word with a significantly different stress. Then the stressed syllable is marked by capital letters as in this example:

lavenda n. lavender. (laVENDa).

Scientific name: When known, the scientific classification of plants and animals has been included, as in the following example:

baaboon n. howler monkey. Alouatta pigra.

English to Kriol Section

The English to Kriol section of the dictionary is a simple directory for the main Kriol section. It will help users find the full entry in Kriol, including sample sentences and other information. For example, if you know how to spell the English word ant, but you either do not know the word in Kriol or you do not know how to spell the word in Kriol, you would look it up in the English section. There you would see that the Kriol word is ‘aans’, so you could then go to the Kriol section and look for the word aans to find more information about the word.

ant sp. – blak aans, faiyaans, flodflai, krayzi aans, maachin aami aans, papapin, red aans, weewi aans.

In the previous example, you see the word ant listed again, followed by the abbreviation sp. – this lists the Kriol names of specific types of ants, which you can also find in main entries in the Kriol section. There are a number of broad categories that will have lists directing you to specific terms in Kriol.

Homonyms in Kriol are indicated by superscript numbers following the Kriol word, and it will correspond with the homonym number in the Kriol part of the dictionary. For example:

The entries above show that blak can have two completely different meanings in Kriol. In the Kriol section of the dictionary, the first entry will be for blak meaning the colour ‘black’, and the second entry will be for blak meaning ‘block’ in English, which can be a verb (v.) or a noun (n.).

Homonyms in English are indicated briefly by a word in parentheses following the main English word, such as in the following examples:

palm (tree) n. paam.

palm (of the hand) n. han eensaid.

For Kriol entries that are phrases rather than a single word, the key word under which you will search in the Kriol part of the dictionary will be in bold font. The example directs you to look under the entry for 'han' to find the phrase 'han eensaid'.

Words can also have different senses of the same meaning. Some of these senses are numbered and listed in the entries in the Kriol section of the dictionary, but they are not numbered in the English section. However, these senses are sometimes indicated by the part of speech designations or sub-entries under the main entry.

A number of words in Kriol, like in any other language, can have variations in the way they are pronounced and spelled. Some of these variations are shown and separated by slashes (.../...). The spelling under which you will find the main entry in Kriol is listed first, and the variations follow.

for prep. fi/fa/fo/fu. truth n. chroot/schroot.

The entry above shows that there are four main variations in Kriol for the English preposition 'for', each of which is equally valid, but we have arbitrarily chosen to list 'fi' as the main entry in the Kriol section of the dictionary. For many words, we have chosen the more contemporary variation as the main entry and older versions as secondary entries. For example, many young adults now say 'chroot' rather than 'schroot', so the fuller or main entry will be under 'chroot', but 'schroot' is also a valid pronunciation and spelling.

Ellipses (marked by ...) indicate that various personal pronouns could fill that space. For example, in the following entry, the ... could be replaced by 'yu' or 'ih' or 'dehn' or 'shee'.

decide v. disaid, mek op... main .

Many Kriol words look and sound similar to English words, but they actually have quite different meanings, or they are used grammatically in a different way than in English. This is not easy to show in the brief entries in the English section. We would encourage users of this dictionary to check example sentences in the Kriol section of the dictionary to see how to correctly use the words in Kriol.

The Kriol Writing System

The Kriol writing system is phonemic, based on sound rather than rules. Each sound is represented by only one symbol. For example: a word containing the ‘long e’ sound will always be written as ee in Kriol, regardless of how it is spelled in English. Once a person learns the symbol for each sound, he or she will more easily know how to spell any word in Kriol just the way that person pronounces it. As you will note in the chart below, in the English writing system, sounds are represented in many different ways, and are governed by many rules that must be memorized.

Below is a simple summary of some of the sounds of Belize Kriol and the symbols (or combination of symbols) used to represent them in writing.<sup>2</sup> Notes contrasting the English and Kriol symbols are included. (Example words are in brackets).

Kriol Letter	Sample word	Sample picture	Notes
a	hat		NOTE: The a in Kriol is similar to the a sound in father in English
aa	waata		NOTE: This sound is like the one above but is drawn out for a longer time. English does not write this sound, but it is necessary in Kriol.
ai	naif		NOTE: This ‘long i’ sound can be written in English as ai [aisle], i [icon], ie [lie], igh [sigh], y [why], or iCe [bite] – note that ‘silent letters, such as ‘silent e’, are not used in Kriol.

<sup>2</sup> For a complete explanation of the Kriol writing system, see You can read and write Kriol, Belize Kriol Project 2005. For linguistic charts of the sound-symbol correlation and a detailed discussion of the sound system, see The Song of Kriol: A Grammar..., Decker 2005.

ay	ayz		NOTE: This ‘long a’ sound can be written in English as ay [ray], ai [pail], aCe [lake], a [angel], eigh [eight].
b	batl
ch	chayn		NOTE: The ‘c’ is never used by itself in Kriol, only in the combination ch . The ‘hard c’ and ‘soft c’ of English, as in car and face , are represented by k [kaa] and s [fays] respectively in Kriol.
d	daag
e	bed		NOTE: In Kriol an ‘h’ is added to this ‘short e’ sound when it appears at the end of a word, as in weh [where], seh [say], deh [there], tideh [today], geh [get].
ee	leef		NOTE: This ‘long e’ sound can be written in English as ee [peel], ea [pear], eCe [mete], ie [relieve], ei [receive], eo [people], ey [key], ay [quay], i [ski].
f	feda
g	goat
h	haas

i	pig		NOTE: Kriol does not have the same ‘short i’ sound as English. This sound in Kriol is made further to the front of the mouth (between ‘short i’ and ‘long e’).
j	jekeit		NOTE: The ‘j’ sound is represented in English by j [jacket], or g [cage].
k	kow		NOTE: The ‘k’ sound is represented in English by k [kit], c [cap], or ck [peck].
l	lag
n	nayl		NOTE: The ‘n’ sound is represented in English by n , as in nail , or kn as in know .
ng	wing		NOTE: There are numerous words in Kriol with a strong ‘ng’ sound which is not heard in English, such as tong [town] and mongtin [mountain]. <sup>3</sup> On the other hand, the ‘-ing’ ending in English is usually shortened to ‘-in’ in Kriol, as in fishin [fishing].

<sup>3</sup> Regarding words containing the combination of sounds represented by nk, the pronunciation ngk (emphasizing the g sound) is heard much more strongly in Kriol, than it is in English. Nevertheless, for the sake of efficiency, the dictionary committee has decided to write it as nk, except for a few two syllable words like pongkin [pumpkin] and mongki [monkey].

o	okro		NOTE: The ‘short o’ sound in Kriol is not exactly the same as in English. In Kriol it is made by rounding the lips more. <sup>4</sup>
oa	boan		NOTE: The ‘long o’ sound is written in English as o [open], oa [boat], oe [toe], oCe [note], ow [crow], ough [though], eau [plateau], or oh [oh].
oo	shooz		NOTE: The ‘long u’ sound is written in English as oo [broom], oe [shoe], uCe [cute], ue [blue], ew [blew], ui [fruit], or ough [through].
ow	hows		NOTE: This sound is written in English as ow [cow], ou [out], or ouCe [house].
p	pensl
r	rayn
s	son		NOTE: This sound is written in English as s [sun] or ‘soft c’ [face].
sh	shobl

<sup>4</sup> When the ‘o’ appears at the end of a syllable or a word, some writers of Kriol prefer to add an ‘h’, but the makers of this dictionary have chosen to add ‘h’ to the following words only: doh, goh, legoh, lesgoh, nohmoh, soh.

t	taiga
u	fut		NOTE: This ‘short u’ sound in English is written as u [ put ] or as oo [ foot ].
v	veekl		NOTE: In archaic Kriol speech, the ‘b’ sound was often used rather than ‘v’ as in riba [river].
w	wowla
y	yaam		NOTE: Words ending in ‘y’ in English are written with an ‘i’ in Kriol, as in baybi [baby]. In some Kriol words, the initial consonant sound glides into a ‘y’ sound, such as kyap [cap]. <sup>5</sup>
z	zip

Nasal vowels:

ahn	wahn	NOTE: In Kriol, ‘hn’ following a vowel shows that the vowel is nasalized (i.e. said through the nose). It is necessary to differentiate because wahn [a] is a different word from wan [one]; dehn is different from den , etc.
ehn	dehn
ihn	hihn
ohn	kohn

<sup>5</sup> This glide occurs much more frequently in older Kriol speech, and among other Caribbean Creoles, but seems to be dropping out of BK. For some words which end in ‘r’ in English, in Kriol, the ‘r’ is often dropped and a ‘y’ precedes the vowel (dear becomes dyaa).

Additional Spelling Notes:

Following are some other consonant blends that do not occur in English: bw as in bwai [boy], gw as in gwaava [guava], skr as in skrach [scratch], nj as in hareenj [orange], skw as in skweez [squeeze], jr as in jrom [drum]. The zh sound, as in provizhan [provision] occurs in English but is not written with a zh.

Some Kriol syllables do not contain a vowel: pl as in pipl [people], gl as in eegl [eagle], kl as in nokl [knuckle], tl as in batl [bottle], bl as in taybl [table], and tn as in kathn [cotton].

The sounds represented by the symbols tr and thr in English are not produced in quite the same way in Kriol, so they are better represented as chr, as in chree [tree; three]. Regarding the ‘st blend’, some Kriol speakers drop the intial s; for example, tik rather than stik [stick].

The symbols q and x are not used in Kriol. The qu is represented in Kriol as kw, as in kwik, and the x as ks, as in taks. The d sound and symbol in Kriol replaces the ‘th blend’ of English; for example, dat rather than that.

Double consonants are not used in Kriol. For example: breda [brother], kuda [could], flitaz [fritters], baloon [balloon], sel [sell].

All proper nouns have been given a Kriol spelling in this dictionary. However, the spelling of proper nouns will be left to the writer’s discretion.

The personal pronouns Ah [I], Ai [emphatic I] are capitalized.

Note the special treatment of the following words: No [opposite of yes], noh [negation], noa [to know].

Example: No! Ah noh noa weh yu noa. [No! I do not know what you know.]

Punctuation rules for Kriol are generally the same as those followed for standard English.

A hyphen is used to separate the following sets of words when they occur as parts of verbs: mi-di and da-mi.

Grammar Notes

For a complete description of the grammar, read The Song of Kriol: A Grammar of the Kriol Language of Belize, by Ken Decker, published by the Belize Kriol Project in 2005. However, a few notes follow here to help the users of this dictionary.

Nouns

Nouns are generally made plural by the addition of dehn after the word (unless otherwise noted in the dictionary).

Nouns are often formed from verbs by adding the ending ‘er’ in English or ‘a’ in Kriol, as in kaala [caller] or kota [cutter]. Not all of these nouns have been included in the dictionary.

Pronouns

Contrast of Kriol and English Personal Pronouns:

Subject Pronouns		Object Pronouns
Kriol	English	Kriol	English
Ah/Ai	I	mi/mee	me
yoo/yoo	you	yoo/yoo	you
ih	he/she/it	ahn	him/her
hihn	he/she	hihn	him
shee, ih	she	shee	her
it	it	it	it
wi/wee	we	wi/wee	us
unu	you (pl.)	unu	you (pl.)
dehn	they	dehn	them

(Ai, mee, yoo, wee are emphatic forms of the pronoun.)

Possession is usually formed by placing the word fi before the pronoun, as in di buk da fi yu [the book is yours].

Verbs

Unlike English, Kriol verbs are seldom inflected to show tense, person or number. In Kriol, these are shown by context, auxiliary verbs and tense markers. Generally speaking, tenses are formed by preceding the root verb word with the markers di, mi, mi-di, wahn, as shown below for the root verb ‘to play’:

- |                                   |                           |
|-----------------------------------|---------------------------|
| Ah play evri day.          | ‘I play every day.’       |
| [Present tense]                   |                           |
| Ah di play rait now.       | ‘I am playing right now.’ |
| [Present progressive tense]       |                           |
| Ah mi play yestudeh.       | ‘I played yesterday.’     |
| [Past tense]                      |                           |
| Ah mi-di play di hoal day. | ‘I was playing all day.’  |
| [Past progressive tense]          |                           |
| Ah wahn play tumaaro.      | ‘I will play tomorrow.’   |
| [Future tense]                    |                           |

Kriol action verbs are often followed by a directional word, such as op, dong, een, owt, bak, aan, aaf, rong and weh. Some of these combinations have been listed in the dictionary as sub-entries under the root word.

Adjectives

The most common way that a comparative adjective is formed is with the addition of -er in English, and -a in Kriol; and the superlative is formed with the addition of -est in English, and -is in Kriol, as in the following example:

big, biga, bigis                    big, bigger, biggest

Generally these forms are not listed in the dictionary, unless they do not follow the regular pattern, as in the following examples:

gud, guda/beta, gudis/bes        good, better, best
wos/wosa, wosara, wosis worse, worse(intensified), worst

Adverbs

Adverbs function in Kriol much the same as they do in English, as modifiers of verbs, adjectives or other adverbs. In English, some adverbs are formed by adding ly to an adjective. In Kriol li is added to some words, as in haadli [hardly], but often the li is not added as in the following example:

Ah mi waahn kohn hoahn bad. [I wanted to come home badly.]

Reduplication

A favourite means of emphasizing or intensifying an adjective or adverb in Kriol (but not allowed in English) is by reduplication, as in the following example:

Wi reech deh kwik kwik. [We reached there very quickly.]

English to Kriol

USAGE NOTES (see Guide to Using the Dictionary in the Introduction for more information):

- The English to Kriol section of the dictionary is a simple directory for the main Kriol section.
- After some broad categories you will see the abbreviation sp. – which will have lists directing you to specific terms in Kriol.
- Homonyms in Kriol are indicated by superscript numbers following the Kriol word.
- Homonyms in English are indicated briefly by a word in parentheses following the main English word, or by the part of speech designation.
- The key word of a phrase, under which you will search in the Kriol part of the dictionary, will be in bold font.
- Words that can also have different senses of the same meaning are numbered and listed in the entries in the Kriol section of the dictionary, but not in the English section. However, these senses are sometimes indicated by the part of speech designations or sub-entries under the main entry.
- Variations in the way Kriol words are pronounced and spelled are separated by slashes (.../...). The spelling under which you will find the main entry in Kriol is listed first, and the variations follow.
- Ellipsis, marked by ..., indicate that various personal pronouns could fill that space. For example, in the following entry, the ... could be replaced by ‘yu’ or ‘ih’ or ‘dehn’ or ‘shee’.
- British spelling rather than American spelling has been followed for most English words.
- Many Kriol words look and sound similar to English words, but they may have a different meaning, or they are used grammatically in a different way than in English. We would encourage users of this dictionary to check example sentences in the Kriol section of the dictionary to see how to correctly use the words in Kriol.

...Whatever the origins, the words which make up the vocabulary of our Kriol language have at last been adequately recognized and I am sure I speak for all Belize in congratulating the editors of the dictionary and the Kriol Council whose hard work has now borne fruit.

From the Foreword by:

Sir Colville Young, Governor-General of Belize and Founding Member of the Belize Kriol Project

The Kriol-English/English-Kriol Dictionary represents a significant achievement in the work of the National Kriol Council to preserve and facilitate the understanding and use of the Kriol language and culture. On behalf of the Ministry of Education I give full support to this initiative and pay tribute to the National Kriol Council for its dedicated efforts and commitment to Belizean culture.

Francis Fonseca
Attorney General and Minister of Education, Culture & Labour

Dictionaries are essential tools in language preservation and conservation. The dictionary of Belizean Kriol will provide countless opportunities for persons to truly learn the language resulting in a greater appreciation of our Belizean heritage.

Dr. Vilma Joseph
Dean of the Faculty of Education and Arts, University of Belize

Aware that Kriol has become more than just our lingua franca, it has earned its well-deserved place among other languages in Belize. This publication, a 10-year labour of love, is seen as an essential teaching tool especially for speakers and students of English as a second language. Yu mos get it fu yu klaas ahn fu yooz da yu hows!

Ann-Marie Williams
President Protem, Belize Independent Media Association

You all have accomplished a delightfully Kriol masterpiece of linguistic excellence with this Belizean Kriol Dictionary!

Paul Townsend
Linguistic Consultant, SIL International

...an essential tool for every serious writer who loves the Kriol flavor.

Colin Hyde
Belizean author and newspaper columnist
